Arrowwood-Queenstown Juniors Break Even With Hillcrest Jrs.

The Arrowwood and Queenstown Juniors made their debut in junior baseball in Arrowwood last Friday when they engaged the strong Hillcrest Juniors, champions of the Crosses Nest Pass, in a double bill, and earned a fifty-fifty split on the days play, taking the first game by a close 6-5 score, but losing out in the evening game 10-5. The local boys suffered from the fact they had never played together before and some of them had played very little this year, while the visiting team had been organized and playing throughout the year. In the next games our boys should be comparatively stronger from the experience gained in the first games.

Ab Crellin occupied the mound in the 1st game and turned in a creditable life hit performance while Marconi, Hillcrest pitcher was tapped for 10 early hits, one of which was a three bagger by Ab Crellin. The local boys batted a .303 average in this game, while the visitors batting average was .172. In the second Crellin was safe at 1st on an error, and Jim Rubbelke hit safely going to 2nd on the throw to home, but Crellin was safe with the first run, McCullough failed to hit but McCullough tapped a single to short right scoring Rubbelke. Hillcrest tied up the score in the 3rd inning. The locals went to work in the 6th, Norton, Segal and Crellin singing in succession, Norton scoring on Crellins hit, and Segal going out at home plate. Rubbelke hit to shortstop and was safe on an error at first, Crellin scoring McCullough singled to right field scoring Rubbelke. McCullough sacrificed, McCullough advancing to 3rd, but Cary grounded out. Hillcrest added two in the 8th, but Crellin for the locals, in their half of the 8th, hit a 3 bagger and scored when McCullough singled. In the 9th Seaman of Hillcrest walked, Favero sacrificed and Seaman scored on Drapers hit, but Draper was out, sending second to end the game.

Second Game

Seaman pitched the 2nd game for Hillcrest. Rubbelke started for the locals and was relieved by Norton who was relieved in turn by Richards. Baranek scored in the 1st inning on his own single. Rubbelke scored the tying run in the 2nd when he walked, McCullough sacrificed and Dunka hit a long safety to right. Hillcrest added two in the 3rd, Norton went in to pitch in the 4th but the infield weakened and Draper scored. In this inning Dunka cut off 2 more runs with a brilliant running catch on his un-gloved hand to make the 3rd out. Crellin scored a run in the 4th. A combination of hits and errors allowed Hillcrest 4 runs in the fifth. Richards assumed mound duties in the 6th and mowed opposing batters down for the next 3 innings. The local boys scored twice in the sixth inning. Crellin was safe on an error and scored on Rubbelkes 3 bagger. Rubbelke scored on a wild pitch. Two more Hillcrest runs came in in the 8th when Richards throw to 3rd was wide. McCullough and Norton started a rally in the 9th with 2 down, hitting good singles. Segal was safe on a dropped third strike but Crellin grounded out ending the game. R H E

Mrs. Elizabeth Speer Passes to Reward

The funeral of the late Mrs. N. Speer, who died at her home at Vulcan, Tuesday, August 25 was held from the Church of Christ, Vulcan, this Thursday afternoon, August 27th, at 2.30 o'clock, with a large attendance of friends from all parts of the district. A wealth of floral offerings were evidence of esteem from a wide circle of friends. The service was conducted by Rev. E. G. Hassell. Interment was made in the Vulcan cemetery under the direction of the Snodgrass Funeral Home.

Mrs. Speer was born at Tara, Ontario, in 1871, the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John Burr. On October 8th, 1890, Elizabeth Burr was united in marriage with N. Speer. In 1902 they moved to Western Canada, settling near Brandon, Manitoba. They came to Alberta in 1911, settling in the Vulcan district, where Mr. Speer took up farm lands. In recent years they resided in town.

For some time Mrs. Speer operated a maternity home in Vulcan. Her nursing ability, coupled with kindness, made her institution a popular one. Coming from a family of church workers, her father being a pastor, she was prominent in the church work of the Vulcan Church of Christ. At the time of her passing, she held the office of president of the Ladies Circle of the Church of Christ. Her understanding of human nature made her beloved by everyone with whom she had contacts. Her passing was regretted by a large number of friends and neighbors, yet her release came after much suffering from a lengthy illness and her reward was a peaceful one. She was aged 63 years and four months.

She is survived by her husband; four daughters, Mrs. J. Elder of Biggar, Sask., Mrs. R. Elder of Lenex, Sask., Mrs. W. P. DeWitt of Arrowwood, and Mrs. Jas. King of Calgary; four sons, Winter of Vulcan, Donald of Meadow Lake, Sask., William of Vulcan and Earl of Cochrane. Fifteen grandchildren survive. Also surviving are two sisters, Mrs. S. Scott of Hainsburg, Alta., Mrs. J. McCann of Arrowwood, and five brothers, J. W. Burr of Winnipeg, D. Burr of Hot Lake, Alta., W. J. Burr of Horburg, Alta., R. H. Burr of Alliance and R. E. Burr of Calgary—Vulcan Advocate

Cannot Be Calculated

Amount of Happiness You Can Produce By Smiling

Be cheerful! Which will you do—smile, and make others happy, or be crabbed, and make everyone around you miserable? The amount of happiness you can produce is incalculable if you show a smiling face and speak pleasant words. There is no joy like that which springs from a kind act or pleasant deed, and you may feel it at night when you rest, and at morning when you rise, and through all the day when about your business.

THE FAMOUS
RUMING
LINIMENT

Minard's
"KING OF PAIN"
LINIMENT

"Ye, you do sound as if you might be the very girl I'm looking for. . . . And then he went on amazingly: 'I've been hunting this town over, turning everything up and down, wishing that Fate would send me a girl such as you seem to be.
A lovely girl who has been placed and seen things, who could take her place anywhere, and probably has, even if she wouldn't want it known —a girl without family ties or other encumbrances, you understand?' His smile twinkled at her little crookedly.
"Beginning to get a little of the whiff of the cross examination? And—a girl with sufficient disregard for the conventions to allow herself to be molded into the type I want her to represent? A reckless, heartless, fast-living playgirl? Again the twisted smile. 'I was beginning to believe such a girl could exist only in fiction, but—'

Starr caught her breath sharply, looking at him as though searching for the Megalotaphon physical attributes his words intimated might be expected to be discovered. What madness was this? For a fleeting moment Starr feared that the curse of Atun-Aran, mercifully forgotten for a few pitiful moments, was striking her mind instead of her body. This couldn't be real.

Probably she was still back in the Museum, still under the spell of a painted priestess. She was uncertain whether this whole episode of the cake of painted women and licentious-looking men—and the man whose very appearance represented to her all she had lost, all she might ever hope to grasp—was a fantastic creation of her own imagination.

"Hassan," she had deliberately called him in her own mind, stubbornly putting away the idea that of all the people in the world she had ever seen he least resembled anything or anybody Egyptian or Arab.
In that peculiar mood where she had determined to embrace, instead of cringe, from the things Egyptian which had turned her father to his death, she had decided on this man for the man as symbolic for this, her own Arabian Night's tale. It couldn't be anything else.

Idly she wondered what his name might really be. That didn't matter, either, in this tumultuously foolish dream.

She stole a glance at "Hassan's" strong profile, the warm pressure of his hand sending tingles of fire through her cold blood. Oh, no, he was real enough! No Arabian Nights "Hassan." Probably somebody called Reggie by his friends, or on the other hand, Bill.

He went on rapidly, as though making the most casual conversation:

"I'll provide you with an apartment, of course, the kind of setting you should have. As a matter of fact"—he paused a moment, studying her—"Gad! What an idea! With these things, collecting—all this talk we're having about Egypt—you're not Egyptian, of course, but what an idea! You could be it, and—"

He stared at her, as if he didn't see her at all, but as if she were some puppet of his imagination he was trying to set into his own little jig-saw puzzle place. "You could forget you'd ever been—"

Starr didn't deny him, but she found herself nodding, taking part in the game whatever it was, as she said dreamily:

"But—forget—!" It was a halfhypnotic, mechanical reply. How much she wanted to forget! "The Arabs have a saying: 'In the desert you should have. As a matter of
these things, collecting—all this talk

"What an actress!" he murmured, the half-contemptuous grin came back and he went on in the same cold-blooded business tone.

"I'll furnish the setting, yes. I'll introduce you to the right people.
I'll make you shine like a diamond.
If you fall in with me you won't be in the two of us to do but to play to your heart's content."

So that was it, was it? She might have known. "If you fall in with me—" The same old proposition any girl in the world would have recognized, even as unattractive as the girl Starr. Evidently, when it appeared, were world-wide and were not. Even she could recognize that old thing for what it was. The same old thing merely dressed up in new folds!

Starr had thought that there was no room in her tired heart for more emotion. But another worm of bitterness ate in, creeping along, lingering, making itself at home.

Yet in spite of it she found herself considering the offer. This was not the same thing she had been up against at the employment agency.
It was quite another matter. The lascivious old beast who wanted to employ you in the guise of secretary, who wanted you to "be nice to him!" This man—he represented so much of all she had looked upon from afar.
He was her own kind. He represented almost all that she wanted.

His hitherto well catalogued thoughts on one subject whirled in a vortex, spun to a centre. Other girls—Girls did sell themselves for less than six months of life. Every day. They thought nothing of it.
Why not she, who had so little to lose so much to gain? The stranger, this New York Arabian Night's "Hassan" who had materialized merely at a tumultuous wish, was offering her everything she wanted so desperately—except true love, of course. And that she desired, that she could not have, even though it should be offered.

Her voice was brittle as her head felt the impotence of the wish, of those ancient priestesses she resembled.

"And the price?"

"Hassan" sounded suddenly shocked. As quickly he moved it away from her.

"Oh, you mustn't misunderstand me." He glanced quickly at her, then away, but in one quick glance, decided not to make the bald statement he had intended. He put it in a mild way. "I—er—I assure you I'll not attempt to inflict myself upon you in any—unpleasant way. It's a business proposition—merely. You will be on a salary. You see, it will work out like this: All the time you are in the Museum, as you may want to play, you will actually be working for me."

"Hassan's a da, effendi," said Starr softly.

"Let it be your own," said the man, carelessly. "I salute you, too, and you can take it or leave it."

Starr wanted to study him, did not dare. But catching a slanting glance of his eyes, she was intently absorbed of her suspicions. What ever this man was, this "Hassan" of Broadway, he wasn't that kind!

He wasn't the kind who picked up girls on the street or second-hand in cafes, gently because they were alone. He didn't have to. He had that better charm, the charm of irresistible to the opposite sex.
Hassan's felt it herself when they were dancing—all the time before and after! Starr made a mental guess that her "Hassan" had kept many a debutante sitting by her telephone, drumming her polished finger nails, waiting for his call.

He was waving away the waiter who hovered obsequiously near.
Starr saw him go, and she was to a flash of doubt in them, for all she had said.

"I've got a lot more to say to you," he said. "There's plenty to be planned. How about us getting out of here—my place isn't far away—we can have a bite of supper there, and—well, there's plenty to talk about. . . ." He was rising. "Let's go."

Starr did not answer, for there was no answer. She was conscious only of the soft clatter of clinking glasses of the place, the muted clamor of traffic outside, the unreality of everything as she picked up her purse, shivering a little, feeling much in a daze as she felt him take her arm and guide her toward the door as though she had no will of her own.

She made only one remark when he settled her in the taxi. She said:

"I'm afraid I won't be a very good companion. I had a growth when you drifted by. I—I feel just like breaking things."

"Don't let me interfere with any of your childish pleasures," he said, and laughed, cheerfully. "Anything you like to do, I'll be in to see you get a lot of ex-Christmas presents at home you can try your hand on.
And the pleasure will be all mine."

CHAPTER V.

Starr did not see the calculating glance Farrington gave her in the darkness of the taxi. If there had been any lingering doubts in his mind, this simple acquisition of a girl going with him wherever he led finished that. His conscience was clear. And why not, he argued to himself, seeing where he had at last caught up with her? She might have her own racket, but at least she was good enough at it for her to stick out so plainly, and he could make her to his own wishes.

They got out before the low doorway of an old-fashioned home, of those obviously made into bachelor apartments of the marter class. He led her through the doorway lighted

Sure Of A Welcome

United States Has Warm Affection
For King Edward

Every good American will echo bordered the words of President Roosevelt in Quebec—"We look forward to the day when, finding it possible to come again to the Dominion, his (King Edward's) royal visit with his neighbors in the United States." What an uproarious greeting would receive the King and Queen when they arrived in their history since a time thing and would do more than a hundred polo matches, cup races and naval and economic conferences to promote a better mutual understanding. There is an abiding affection here for English institutions and a warm affection for the King—and Americans would welcome an opportunity to display their affection for the young King has not hesitated to point from precedents and to make name his own, an acceptance of the President's indirect invitation would not be surprising.

It is nothing new for a President to leave his native land. President Wilson went to Europe twice. President Harding to Vancouver, and President Coolidge to Cuba. But the King of England has never set foot in the United States—Boston

Rare Autograph Volume

Contains Letters Written By Famous Men In 18th Century

A rare volume of autographed letters written by kings, scientists, authors and statesmen of Italy, France and England between 1500 and 1800, has been discovered in the Museum of Kiev.

The book is said to contain autographs and letters of Voltaire, Decartes, Moliere, Cardinal Richelieu, Philip II, of Spain, and Beau-marchais among others. It was published in Paris at the beginning of the Nineteenth Century.

The material for the book, of which the Kiev copy is believed to be the only one in existence, is stated to have been gathered from the archives and libraries of over sixty European countries.

While the outside temperature stood at 103 degrees, the fountain in the post office at Findlay, Ohio, froze. Postmaster W. T. Aut said the mechanism had gone "hay-wire."

Wants To Write Book

Young Railway Porter Hopes To Return To West Indies

To Emerson R. Mahon, portering is but a means to an end. The 26-year-old observation-car attendant on the Canadian Pacific Railway's train that runs from Winnipeg to Montreal town, hopes, some day, to return to his native West Indies and there to write a book.

Mahon would like to tell the world of the ancient customs and practices of the West Indians, particularly of those on the life of Grenada, where he was born and from where he came to Canada 24 years ago. He intends, some day, to dig deep into the centuries—old lore of the people in that group of islands in the Caribbean Sea.

But before doing that the smiling porter wants to progress further in his study of the Hebrew religion.
Mahon is an ordained Rabbi. He holds seven degrees in the ancient Jewish faith. His ambition is to attend a Hebrew seminary in Great Britain, to obtain the highest degree in his religion, that of Rav, or chief rabbi.

Mahon's home is in Winnipeg.
Four nights a week he is "on the road," the other three being spent in the Manitoba capital, where he preaches his faith. He explained that there are seven degrees in the Hebrew religion. He is authorized to practice three of them and must continue his seminary studies to obtain the remaining four.

The young porter explained that Hebrew is not at all an uncommon religion among negroes. The faith, he said, has its beginning in the West Indies in 1892. In that year, he related, Jews were expelled from Spain, many of them migrating to the western hemisphere.

The negro slaves as a general rule conformed to the religion of their masters. His grandmother, who married an Irishman who fled to the West Indies from his native land, was a year before slaves were freed.
Her religion was Hebrew, was that of her "master." That has been the religion of his family ever since.

British Empire In Ships

Artist Spends Ten Years Painting
Story Of Empire

A little woman with an idea 100 yards long and 75 feet high has arrived in London to see if she can sell it.

She is Clara Farga Thomas, noted American artist, and the idea, which she has spent ten years perfecting, is the pictorial story, painted on pipes, of the British empire in ships—starting with the Regent, built in the fourteenth century, and finishing with the "Queen Mary."

"Since childhood ships have fascinated me," Mrs. Thomas declared.
"I have haunted museums and searched records to get all details accurate."

Her professional career started when, owing her dressmaker money, she offered to paint her furniture. By the time she had finished the dressmaker owed her money.

While in London, Mrs. Thomas is using the studio of Sir John Lavery, famous painter.

Pencils From Japan

Laid Down At Less Than Cost Of Raw Materials

Imports of pencils into Canada from Japan in May of this year were about equal to estimated domestic production for the same month, and were almost as great as total imports from Japan for the whole year 1930, says Bookkeeper and Stationer, Toronto. The average prices of these imports was placed at approximately 34 cents per gross, compared with a valuation of 1935 importations of 36 cents per gross, and 61 cents per gross in 1934. The laid-down cost declared by Japanese pencil manufacturers to be actually lower than the cost of the raw materials that went into them.

while the total for the first six months of 1935 was 87,841 ounces as Little Helps For This Week

A soft answer turneth away wrath, but grievous words stir up anger.
Proverbs 15:1.

Remember Thine Image, Lord in me.
Lovely and gentle may I be.
No charge but Thine to Thee are dear.

No night and day, though ever find,
No pride in my untried mind.
But Thine be heaven-born peace be Neither may I do aught displeasing to thy neighbor; and if thou shouldst be angry with me, I will be patient. A small injury shall go as forgiveness or speak to him with gentleness. Injuries hurt not more in the receiving than in the remembering. A small injury shall go as it comes, a great injury may die or sup with you. Why should you vex yourself? Grief for things past that cannot be remedied, and care for things to come that cannot be prevented, may easily hurt and can never benefit you. Therefore commit yourself to God in both, and enjoy the present.

Man Without A Country

Former Russian Leader May Be Forced To Leave Norway

Indications are that Leon Trotsky, former Russian revolutionary leader, might soon be returned to his usual status of a man without a country.
The wandering, sickly Bolshevik is to be expelled from Norway, Government sources said, if charges of new international intrigue are proved against him. At the same time, Pravda, Moscow Communist organ, made clear that there would never be hope for reconciliation between Trotsky and Stalin.

Banished from his own revolutionary land and excluded from many others, Trotsky accepted refuge in Norway when the promise to refrain from propaganda or other international activity. Recently young Norwegian Nazis broke into Trots-ky's home at Hovfoss and found papers which they said dealt with plots in France and Spain. They handed them over to police.

Trotsky entered Norway June 15, 1935.

Britain Going Ahead

In spite of the reduction in parcel post rates, Britain's postal services had a profit of £11,250,000 in the last year, the highest since 1926, according to the British post office, had a record income. It is another sign of the way Britain is going ahead.

Marguerite Sallé, artists' model, says she is the most painted woman in the world. She estimates that in the nine years she has posed for artists, she has been painted or sketched 5,000 times.

It is questionable whether the saw-ty is as much a menace to Canadian forests as the sawmill.

According to a trade journal there is a distinct boom in new cars. And usually a distinct rattle in old ones.

Thirty-Six Million in One Hand

Eight cheques totalling in value no less a sum than $36,755,450 changed hands on May 1 when the Canadian Pacific Railway paid off the balance in principal and interest due of the sixty million dollar loan contracted in 1932, and guaranteed by the Dominion Government at that time. It will be remembered that in June of that year the Canadian Pacific had to raise the sixty millions to meet maturing obligations. The money markets of the world were then feeling the full effect of the financial crisis and were closed with the result that it was not possible for a Canadian institution to borrow so large a sum on advantageous terms. The Canadian banks therefore agreed to combine in making this loan, but as an added measure of security to the bank the Dominion Government agreed to guarantee re-payment of the loan both as to principal and interest. The loan was to mature in five years, or might be paid off by the Canadian Pacific prior thereto on notice to be given to the banks. It has been paid off in full in less than three years, and the obligation of the Government to guarantee payment came to an end automatically the moment the cheques issued today were presented. Furthermore, since all interest and other charges have been paid by the Company, the entire transaction has not cost the Dominion Government one cent. The loan originally carried an interest rate of five per cent., but later this was reduced to four and a half per cent. New loans raised by the Company to pay this off were made at a still lower rate of interest.
